

St. Michael's University School

Outstanding preparation for higher learning and for life.

April 28, 2008

To Whom It May Concern:

I have known Joel Tremblay for one year during which time he has worked at St. Michael's University School as a coaching intern. One of the duties of the coaching interns at SMUS is that they are attached to boarding houses, serving to relieve house parents so that they can attend to administrative duties. The interns also become deeply involved in other aspects of boarding house life – house games, house dinners, etc.

Joel has been very helpful this year in Harvey House, covering duties for me, in particular, so that I could deal with the various affairs of the house. Joel became involved in whatever was going on in the house and demonstrated some excellent leadership in his talent areas. He spent considerable time, for example, coaching our house basketball teams in order to prepare them for competition.

Joel is also a talented artist and gave freely of his abilities when artistic counselling or production was required. This included supervising an evening Art Club for high school students.

I believe that Joel has a lot to offer the teaching profession. He is energetic and committed to his work. We have enjoyed having him around Harvey House this year and wish him best of luck.

Yours truly,
